Wie geht's, Musiklieberen?

How goes it, folks? We here at WXDU have been having a hell of an exciting time this past week.

We had the privilege of having the premier acts performing within the Triangle area in both the rock and jazz realms stop by and pay us a visit. First, ubiquitous jazz trombonist Curtis Fuller, in town following a very successful stint in New York with the Jazztet, dropped in to rap with his old friend, Paul Jeffrey, hot sax-man, Duke's Jazz Artist-In Residence, and a very fine WXDU jazz DJ, with whom he performed at Duke.

Later in the week, Tupelo Chain Sex provided a different sort of jazz during their show at the Brewery--be-bop swing with a touch of thrash. A very fun time, that show, and very well received. And what a great bunch of guys. In the middle of a four-week tour in support of their album, Spot The Difference, they stopped in for an interview, before heading up to D.C. and the 9:30 Club.

Service continues to be excellent. Special kudos to Homestead, CD, Columbia, A&M, SST and Wrestler. In the works is a collaborative effort between WXDU and the Duke student newspaper, The Chronicle, wherein 'XDU jocks will be writing reviews of the best releases of late spring and early summer to be included in the mongo send-home edition that goes out to all the vacationing students and incoming freshmen. The deadline will be sometime in early July, so be sure to send any prospective candidates soon! Once again, my(sorrowfully limited) official office hours are Tuesdays 1-3pm, though I, or sundry other members of our illustrious staff are present most weekday afternoons. I apologise for not getting touch with as many of you as I should--I've been mightily busy just getting my sea(vinyl?)legs with this MD biz, but I hopefully will be calling many of you soon to fill you in on the scene here, and to find out what's cooking there. Until then, take care and best wishes!

P.S.: I know it's a wee bit kitschy, but we(and our listeners)really groove on promotional buttons. (Hint, hint!)

Aufwiedersehen,

Bryce
